The Chess Club this year has been a place for people to learn to play and improve playing chess. We had a ladder competition throughout the year to see who were the best players and for those players to challenge other players in other schools. The Chess Club is only a part of the games club for people to play backgammon. Dungeons and Dragons and other games. Mrs. Schumacher has made this club possible by opening up her room during lunch. Hopefully, this club will continue at Newman and Ursuang and encourage more people to play chess and other games.

Understanding Ourselves and Others

American Field Service (AFS) is dedicated to the belief that a wider awareness of the diverse cultures of this world will toster a greater appreciation of our common humanity, and hopefully, the peaceful coexistence of different people on this planet. Since 1980, when Disuline decided to participate in this international student exchange program, exciting opportunities for learning have been made available to members of our community.

Kim Box and Gina Clemens put their Spanish to the test during their stays in South America. Kim spent the summer in Columbia and Gina immersed herself in the lives of the people of Uruguay for a full year. Joycelyn Russo really got a glimpse of the tremendous variation in customs and attitudes when she was invited to spend the summer going to school and living with a family in Japan.

and living with a family in Japan.

The other advantage of having an AFS chapter has been the presence of foreign students at Ursuline. Our visitor for 1981-82 was Meltern Demirer from Turkey. Perhaps she summed it up best when she said, "There's no better way to learn about your own culture and everything that you take for advantage at home, than to cross the ocean and to live in a totally new What's "Quimme"?

Through such projects as "Godspell", we have been able to share our love with the schools. Through other "retreats" and camping trips, we've grown in our love for each other. Without the support we've given each other, some of us might still be locked behind walls. Others might not have had as much fun in high school, and I wouldn't have made it through. So a toast to every member — for the lears and the joy, the pain and the healing. Leaving is going to be hard

The Drama Club ... Acting Up

I feel that being in drama has helped me quite a bit. So far this year we have done improvisation and scenes from several different plays. We did lip-synsc, comedy sketches, and had to write scenes ourselves. Being in drama has also helped me with the play because not I know more than I did last year. It's been a lot of fun. Mr Parish is an excellent teacher.

This year the Friends of Literature Club, through active campaigning and recruitment, was able to increase their membership over 30%. The club's annual outing to the Windsor Archive of Fine Literature had to be cancelled this year when the membership, too engrossed in the written word missed the bus. More events equally as exciting are planned for the future. If you would like to join this new dimension of club fun stop by room 6 every third Saturday morning at 6 AM. Bring a book!

Being treasurer of the Club Francais means collecting dues at the beginning of each month from students who have had at least one year of French, and are entering French II. III. or IV. These dues go towards paying for a plane ticket to France, which is awarded to one lucky student at the end of each year. Members, names are put into a hat and one student name is drawn. #### In Search Of "the Brain"

Amidst the chaotic jungle of lockers, students, and classrooms lurks the elusive homo academus, better known as "child genius", and the Brain". His/her glasses with lenses 20 mm thick can be seen peering from the yel-lowed pages of The Iliad (in Greek, of course) or a recent edition of Tolstov's War and Peace (in Russian). The Irbrary and classroom are the Brain's natural habitats. He she never goes to the movies parties, or ball games. He/she sees television as abominably boring unless an Apple II computer is attached to it

Many people make the mistake of confusing the Brain with "normal" individuals who just set a high goal early and have worked for it with all of their energies

Sharing Talents ... Liturgical Music Group

Being in the Liturgical Music group is fairly similar to being in any other club. It takes group cooperation, organization practice and dedication. In the group, we set certain goals for ourselves, like learning certain music or words to a song. Then we work together lowards that goal.

It's a fol of fun to be in the group. You meet new people who have similar talents. You also learn new songs from the group as well as contributing ones you already know. It's an experience that I hope every one car, enjoy and participate in

With our combined efforts, we hope to stimulate enthusiasm at school liturgical celebrations.

At the beginning of the year we decided on the theme and the format of the vearbook. We looked forward to a book that would be unique — the best book ever. It was exciting, and the ideas never stopped flowing from our brains onto Margie Brady's notebook. To learn how to do a yearbook, we all did a page of the introduction. Then we each took our own section and tried it ourselves

From then on it was a roller coaster of emotions. Some of had help from students who volunteered so much of their time. Others sweated it alone There were moments when we were sure it would be a failure There were others when the onginal enthusiasm came back Each deadline was torture, but we lived through them. It was a labor of love, and for better or worse, here it is. We hope you like it

Golf

If last years performance is any prelude to what Newmans golf team will do this year, we are going to see some great golf. In the State Tournament they finished sixth, which was a great feat. Golf is different than

Being there are only seven of us on the Varsity Team, we are all really close friends. We refer to ourselves as a kind of family. We play together during the summer on a summer league team, so we are together all year round. Gary Lytle is our coach. He works really hard for us. Our whole team likes him a lot, and this really helps us

When we are playing in a match, I know each one of us gives his all, not only for himself, but for each and every player on the team. This is what makes us good

Coach Skov sees a lot of potential in some of the lightweight wrestlers as well

While Newman Finished 5th in the League Tournament, Chad Dorr, Greg Bradly and Paul Garayalde each placed third in their weight class. Mr. Guillen enjoys coaching and looking forward to next year's team. Congratulations to the entire Junior Varsity team.

Varsity Basketball: Cardinal Cagers Confident

The 1981-82 Varsity Basketball Team was one characterized by much hard work, excellent defense and aggressive play. The key players were play making guard Bruce Belden and fine all-around player and captain, Tom Sullivan. The front line of Troy Blank, Pat Vaughan, Mike Burke and Brian Long did an excellent job on the backboards, all season long, against much taller teams. The team concept is best described by their closeness and unselfish style of play Their exciting brand of basketball was their trademark in the North Bay League Play. Among their most noteworthy accomplishments was capturing their own Rose City Tournament Championship, with a 62-54 victory over Terra Linda.

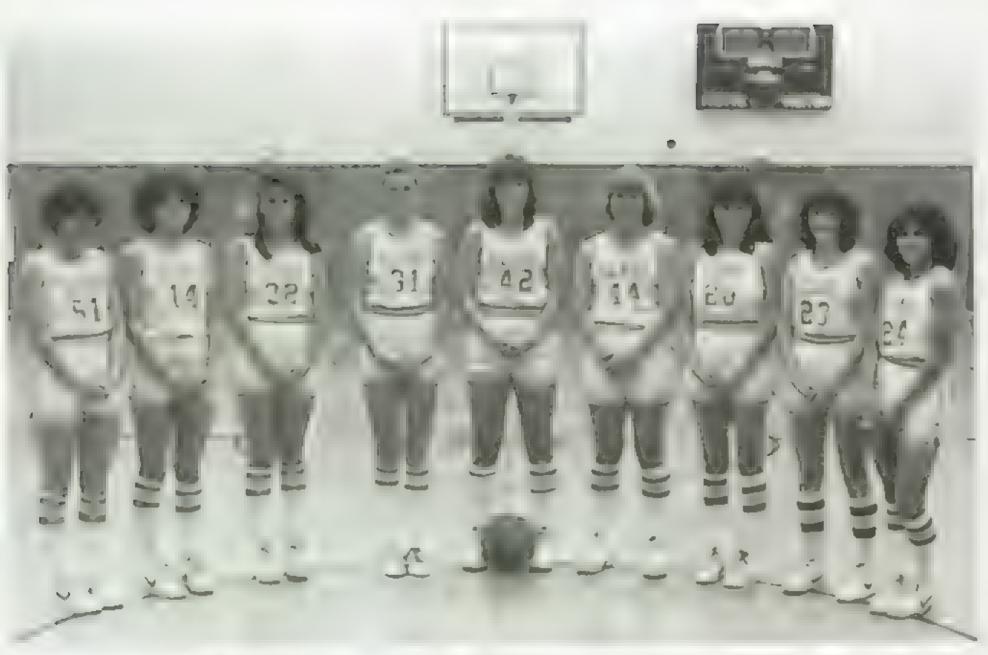

How does it feel to play Varsity Basketball? Well, it's a great experience. You feel great walking onto the gym floor with a couple hundred people rooting you on. You get this weird feeling inside your body saying, "Right on, this is great!" It also makes you play harder knowing that there are people in the crowd velting for you. Actually playing the game is better. You get out on the court and you feel like there's nothing holding you back; you're like a bird flying in the air. It seems like everything is frozen and the only thing moving is you. I just wish there was a way you could play and get the experiences I get playing the game. It's one of the greatest feeling I get, playing the game of basketball

Some years ago, a very lar o man, yed. He walked many miles each day. Not large in physical size, he was a man that seemed to case for anything and anybody. He would give anything to anybody who asked for it. He was colorful at times but could be uncolorful too. Most of the time he was colorful to show he was a man wise with age, making it seem as if he would live as long as he wanted to. This did not happen; one day the color was gone. No more walking those many miles or giving things to people; he was dead. The path he walks now is a long one that will not end for any reason. The one he walks now is as colorful and loving as he was. This person was my great grandfather, the one that started this entire family of mine. I never knew this man, but in some way I know who he was and what he was. I had a feeling of this.

A father waiked with his daughter through the park kicking leaves that had fallen on the wet ground. She asked him why the clouds floated in the sky. He looked at his watch and wondered how his wife's new dress Could possibly be worth so much money.

The daughter smiles at her daddy with her brown eyes.

And thought how lucky she was to have the best daddy in the whole world.

As it began to drizzle lightly, he kept thinking about that damn weather man saying it would be "fair".

He pulled the collar of his jacket tighter around his neck and stared at the ground.

She turned her face up to the sky and began to sing a song
she learned at school last week

The rain felt a little heavier

So be quickened his pace to the car.

"Is it raining because God's crying. Daddy?"

He remembered being locked out of his house in the rain one day years ago and said,

She splashed water from the puddles in the parking lot. He grabbed her hand and shouted, "Hurry up, we're getting all wet."
As she waited for him to unlock the car door she turned and looked at the trees and clouds and wondered why God was crying.

"I think so, Honey."

I know there's a reason why I need to be alone, I need to find a silent place that I can call my own. I seem to get so weary from the battles in this life, And many times it seems that you're the only hope in sight When everything's dark and nothing seems right When there's nothing to win and there's no one to fight You're love is what sustains me Gives me hope and seems to save me I need you here throughout my day. to show me your love in so many ways.

Jonathan Theodore Transton

A sullen, thythmic beat filled the room. Like an observant hawk the ancient clock perched on the mantle. No corner of the tiny basement apartment could escape its view, even in the growing darkness. And the man was no exception. Indeed, he was the focus, sitting quietly in his well-worn chair.

The man was Jonathon Theodore Cranston. His was a slight build and a wiry one. His balding head and rather undistinguished features were not what set him apart, not what made people notice him. But something did. It was that fire in his eyes, that resolution in his walk. Of late, this intensity had increased, so that even strangers shuddered when Jonathon passed them on the street, though they could not have said why. He was like an arrow on a bow, strong so tight that something was bound to snap. When? was the only question

Presently Jonathon rose and began to pace, staring at the shabby rug. It was as though he put every ounce of his concentration into each step. Abruptly he stopped. He stood deathly still for several moments. It was obvious that something very powerful was stewing beneath the surface. This once ordinary man had become quite extraordinary with some determination, the origin of which was unknown to all but himself.

Then, with unmistakable resolve, Jonathon Theodore Cranston picked up an old, musty overcoat and left his dingvectlar-like room. Up the age-worn steps he went, emerging into the dusky street. People in high spirits were all about But Jonathon did not stop. He walked on brusquely

His pace soon conveyed him to another neighborhood Compared to this, his own lower-class neighborhood looked like paradise. The people here were not in high spirits. They stood apathetically in doorways or alleys. Still, Jonathon walked on

At last he reached his destination. It was an ancient apartment building. Jonathon did not hesitate, but bounded up the termite-ridden stairs to the first apartment at the top Here he knocked. A big, surly-looking man opened the door, and without a word, Jonathon Theodore Cranston entered

"What d'ya want now?" the surly man asked

There was a pause. The man walked over to the only window, a pitiful, cracked thing Then Jonathon said calmly. "You killed my brother."

The big man laughed, a hard, bitter sound. And, still gazing out onto the dark streets, not even bothering to face his accuser he said coldly, "Your brother wasn't worth the trouble. I didn't kill him."

"Yes," insisted Jonathon without raising his voice. "Yes you killed my brother. And when you did you left me with only one thing — revenge."

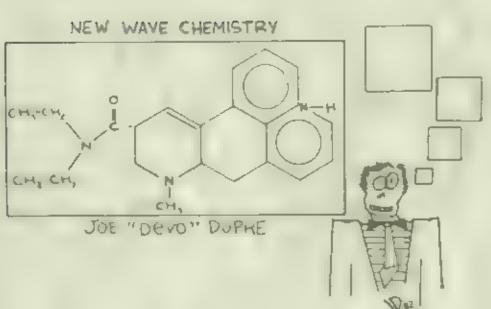

The big man turned away from the window with a look of amusement on his face. But this melted into terror when he saw the pistol the little, wiry man held. Jonathon fired two shots and it was all over. The big man lay dead on the floor

Out in the street again it was as though nothing had happened. People looked up as the resolute figure of Jonathon Theodore Cranston walked past. But their eyes showed nothing of concern, nothing of curiosity — only indifference.

I've heard of country,
I've heard of rock,
I've heard of soul,
and I've heard of Bach
But now there's a new thing,
And its style is called punk
The punkers have short haircuts.

They dress all funny, It's a sight to see, I keep saving to myself, "That could never be me " The lyrics of this music are mostly a few lines: Lines sung over and over, sounding similar to whines. They have such names as the B-52's and sex pistols where they bounce around on stage like absolute imbeciles. I guess I find their music so obnoxious and dull I think I'll always stay, with good old Rock n' Roll Russ Meyer

We sit, each with his own thoughts.

Waiting for our heroes
Listen! Music softly pours from speakers, announcing their appearance.

They're here! They leap on Stage like puppets on strings

"Jerking Back and Forth";
does that hurt?

Enthralled, we move in
Like children to a camptire.

The music takes you.

Are we not men?

Who is that man yonder with the hair of red? Oops! It is the principal, Mr. Carrot Head. He is a great man, I can honestly say, He has helped make this school what it is today. A meeting with him many parents are wishing B the six shows trip somewhere fish In his hand one always finds a coffee cup, Boy! He can really drink the stuff up! He is a caring person, I do not lie. The principal of Cardinal Newman High

Through the door comes the arrogant teacher, He is quite short and lectures like a preacher. He is one we all know well, For of himself he loves to tell Of course, his achievements are many, But telling of them the use isn't any. He tries so hard to be patient and fair, To the student who just doesn't care. I'm sure underneath he's a wonderful man, Even if he is his own greatest fant

Here comes our football team, a bunch of studs to the blay become a specific mal To win every game is their ultimate goal, And if they lose one, they're considered dull Their coach, a stricter man there never was, He wants them to win, and not only because Of the glory he receives when the team is hot, But of the ridicule he gets when they're not. All in all, they're a pretty good bunch, But don't get in front of them when they're eating their lunch

Over in the corner a bunch of ladies stand With aprons on they look so grand. We all admire these great cafeterial personnel Who five times a week go through hell All the students do is scream and holler These brave souls must everyday slave, To make just enough so there's little to save. Sometimes the results are pretty sad But finally to eat, everyone is glad. So hail to these women so brave and few Or else the lunch that is eaten would be made by you!

Now enter some of the students you'll find, Who to their homework and tests pay no mind All they think about is sports and their Buds, These are the typical Newman studs Their cars so very high are jacked And with clothes and garbage are packed. In their pockets combs are stuck So every 5 minutes hair can be tucked. They chew their tobacco like a cow chews a cud. This is the typical Newman stud!

Here comes a nice young man and quite a scholar With hair cut short and shirt with a collarOn his face no hair can be seen, This law enforced by the new school dean His classes are tough, especially Physics and English, Between the two he cannot distinguish At school he's very respectable to say the least, But once off campus he turns into a beast When the final bell rings he jumps into his machine Which he thinks is the baddest and very mean No homework for him, all books thrown away, He wants to take it easy and kick back everyday.

At football games he has fun to shout But only until the cops throw him out. At parties the senior gets even crazier You the next day he is much lazier. At the end of the year he obtains a disease, Not like a cold which makes him sneeze, But one that affects his inner mind And makes him numb and very unkind He has to get out, he just can't wait, To get his diploma and graduate.

Over by the coaches one man stands out, It's our equipment manager, without a doubt You won't find him squabbling over the latest dress He's an individualist, but never a mess-His pants are polvester, red and yellow He always get a smile, a jolly good fellow. the smetres, astronomera a dedented to trade,

He went to Fort Worth last summer, all expenses

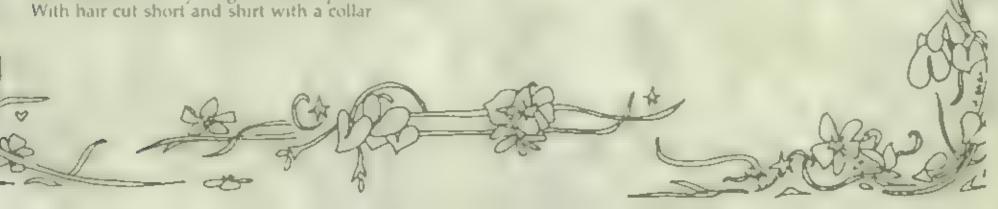

The equipment he issues is in major demand "See me in the morning," the resulting command Ask him for some tape and with a mustache quiver. He'll slam his door, sigh, "Why me?", and then begin to shiver.

When someone is injured he's always on the scene, Pushing people back, but never being mean. With a stretcher in hand, onto the field he'll dance, Ren ceres or table All the spanish athletes have taught him to say

He's Charles W Dahl, or just plain Tuna.

It is now time to bring this story to conclusion, Without a doubt you must be in confusion. From hearing about the people of this school You might take each one to be a fool But mark my word, this is not true, The same as these no others can do. Goodbye for now you women and males, For this is the end of The Cardinalbury Tales

By Tim Bucher, (and Joel Kammer, Erin Flinn, Joe. Bunnell, Rich Seddon, Kelly Cattalini, Stephanie Dickinson, Lisa Foster, and Steve Townsend)

The Cardinalbury

When in October the cold rain falls, And seeps through the roofs and drops in the halls Of the school on the road called Ursuline, Then it is time for assemblies again The school is named for a scho ar of old, A man of godliness, so I am told, A writer of skill matched by very few men, Such was the Cardinal, John Henry Newman. On this one Friday afternoon After a lunch that ended too soon, Gathered the students and the faculty In the gym for an assembly. Counselors and students, priests and nuns, Equipment managers and custodians, Freshmen, juniors, and sophomores, Followed by seniors through the gym doors. Into the bleachers they noisily file, Talking and laughing all the while. Fore the assembly begins, it's worth a minute To describe the gym and the people in it. Read on and I'm sure that you'll agree, A stranger group you'll not soon see.

First enters the freshmen, immature and short. And of the very eager and ambitious sort. With highwater pants and a voice so high, He sounds like a mouse, I do not lie. He tries so hard to be accepted, But in the end is always rejected. He wears glasses and looks absurd And is called by seniors a "little nerd". He thinks he's cool and acts very calmly, But every day he goes home wanting his memmy He wants to look at and talk to the girls, And when he does he chokes and unfurls. His books are stacked high up to his chin So he won't be late when class begins. His hand is first to shoot into the air, But when called upon the answer is not there. When break time comes he runs in an excited way To get his deughnut and milk every day His life is spent with caution and hesitation For he knows that his time will come — initiation. And behind him comes a gir, quite young Looking for boys and drooling at the tongue. This fine freshman appeared to be of noble class, Though, to her teachers, she was known to sass. Her hair was of a medium brown. She put it up when she went to town. She had no hobbies to keep her busy, Except that of making everyone dizzy When it came to mency, this freshman was hold She loved rambows only for their pots of gold.

And against the way, a man was to be seen From the look on his face he must be quite keen. This teacher appeared mild-mannered enough, Truth be told, he knew his stuff An honest and reasonable man was he, Patient and caring to a very high degree.

He spoke with a gently, soothing voice,
And carned himself calmly by choice.
Noise was not his favorite thing
His very presence seemed retaxing his believed strengly in things he thought right.
Able to back them up because of his might.
Not all that tall or heavy set,
He still was the strongest I'd ever met.

In come the sophomores, all humble and sweet,
Their hair nicely combed and clothes all so neat.
They are called rowdy though you may not hear it.
But at the rallies they certainly show their spirit.
By earning the stick each month, I'd say,
No other class can take it away.
The guys try to be study and charmers
To all the girls wearing leg warmers,
But they pay no after their timese little weiners
For they'd rather go out with seniors.

All are silenced as in they walk,
Another teacher and the dean, my, how they stalk!
There stood the teacher, brave and tall,
About English and literature he must have known all.
Immaculately dressed, his hair neatly pressed,
Not-a-one in the room considered him a pest.
However, one minor feature did catch my eye,
Apparently, he was wearing only half a tie.
But for this defect, he was a very jolly fellow,
With a shirt of pink and pants of bright yellow.
Had you searched far and wide, over land and sea,
You would never find one who was quite like he.
Well versed in English, a good coach of soccer,
And according to rumor, an active punk rocker.

And then there is another, just as wise as he,
The dean is his name, the school his responsibility
Quiet by nature, his face showed no wrath,
But woe to the students who dared cross his path.
He made sure that they spend their very last dollars,
Buying button-up shirts with button-down collars.
He was patient with all, never was mean,
Unless some young hoodlum was caught with blue jeans.

The accused would fall on his knees full of repentance,

But the dean would pay him no heed, and calmly pronounce sentence.

Ah, yes, here come the juniors thinking they're great, They want to be seniors, they just can't wait. But they must be calm, just one more year. Then they can experience the senior good cheer. They now have their license and can drive to school, To ride with them one must be a fool!

Into the parking of there are accidents galare. They can't keep the peda away from the floor. Well, give them time, a year and a day. And then you'll see that the juniors are O.K.

"THE JOCK"

On by he struts, Never falling in ruts, He's one tough dude, And just a lil' bit rude. He pumps those weights Overloaded with dates, In school he just gets by, It's said he doesn't cry. Football, Basketball, Track, Scholarships piled in a stack. On he goes to USB, And has never even made a C. Injured his knee in a game Now the Doc says he's lame Out of sports he's forced to quit Now for work he shovels **** The moral of the story appears: To be successful, study for years Sports aren't the only thing Sure it's fun, but only for a fling It's nice to have something To fall back on, When your athletic days Are gone.

FRESHMAN LUNCH

My first lunch period in high school, and I'm so nervous. Oh, here come my friends now. They're running towards me with their socks falling, arms waving, purses flying, and papers scattering. They come to a halt and tell me that I red Nickers just said 'hi' to Charlene! My God' I don't believe it' We final y gather our thoughts, and ten of us walk to the bathroom.

Jan is asking Mary if she has hairspray, Ann wants to borrow some perfume, from Kim, and Sarah is asking Juhe to move so she can stand on the toilet seat to see if she looks perfect! After fifteen minutes all of us walk out with our discussion of Rick Springheid, and what a babe he is. As we near the cafetena, an army of freshmen are coming on. We quickly converse with each other to see if we know any. Thank god Betty knows one of them. We approach each other looking in different directions. Betty approaches Jim. Both armies stop. Betty says hi, and so does Jim. We keep walking like it was nothing but really we can twait for Betty to tell us about the whole experience!

We eat our lunch in a corner table and talk about the football game which is in two weeks. We make a plan to meet in front of the ticket booth and walk in together. After the game we all agree to go to Swen son's, and try to "pick-up a guy." (I got that phrase from a senior)

Having only ten more minutes until the end of lunch we go to our lockers and then to class. We stand perfectly, waiting for the teacher to come. The teacher told us to read the school manual and follow the rules. How could anyone try to break the rules of the school?

On my way home, thinking of questions to ask a senior of what to do in high school. I could only come up with four:

1. How many times should I wash my hair?

2. How many buttons should I unbutton on my shirt — 0,1,2,?

3. Can I say "hi" to seniors or is that against the rules?

4. Should I buy a pair of cherokee sandals with a pair of leg warmers over my pants?

Gosh, I wonder if I'll ever be like the seniors. They are so mature and so perfect! They talk to boys that they hardly even know. (What courage!!)

But next year they will be starting all over again. I'll be a super sophomore, while they will only be froggy freshmen!!

Calvin Klein, Chemin de fer and Vanderbilt for Murjani; All these things the people wear Is it only for popularity?

OP Shorts and rubber thongs, Hawaiian prints and more, Football jerseys, cherokees The sophomores know the score.

Pink leg warmers, worn all wrong (they should be tucked into boots) Purple Shoelaces 'round their heads Quick! Get the gun and shoot;

Mini Skirts worn above the knee,
Walking shorts with "siders"
Argyle socks and, dearie me!
One looks the same as the other!

THE DANCER

Lightly She floats like the mist in the morning sun strong yet frail she is a bird that longs to soar and she is a painter winding in her arms and legs magical colours creating a picture all her own. She turns and reaches for a star with her tiny hand. Then the music stops --- she is gone, as silently as she appeared. But turn on a melody slow and sweet play her a lovesong, and the dancer will always show through for she is beauty and grace and everything that is Fragile and Majestic inside all of us.

Oh day, long awaited come. Oh mighty north wind blow, Push time until everything is soaring Time make days, weeks, and months, Race towards me Make the hours disappear at a wink, Then pause ... on that day in June. When proud smiles fill happy faces, Classmates share an experience That took twelve years to make Hours of hard study, Ending up as cramming before an exam. Trying to please the teachers, Learning Little by little What the world is all about. Building dreams for the future, That grow closer everyday. Until ... we see them right outside the door And finally are able to walk through and grab them. And begin to make them come true.

Then time, After this pause, Return again to your steady pace.

Who am I? Am I a painter or a writer? An activist, A Tragedy, A Dreamer who wishes on things faraway? woman and child in one -"Baby your shoelace is undone" ... And yet there are Cinderella times — Daddy's little girl is "my She's gotten tall" ... isn't there a hidden sparkle behind that smeared smile? So strong So scared. Where to turn Where to go -Keep me safe
"Keep her good" Keep me warm in hard times. Will I find that magic secret? cross that gilded line? "Comb your hair, honey." A little laugh, A tiny sigh — Adulthood So close Yet still faraway

A Happening

He sits down at his desk with a penal and pulls out a pace of paper. Store around sketching a deer he goes to the closet and takes out his rifle. As he turns wound the deer lesps from the page and heads for the door. The man cocks his rifle, aims and shoots the deer, which crumbles to the ground. While he returns his rifle to the closet, the deer floats back to the paper as it fulls to the trash can.

JUST A PAINTING

It's Just a painting But I can Hear it And I can Feel it too.

I can Hear those gulls Their rude, demanding squawks Those fat scavenger sea gulls.

And the blat of the fog horn It's a distant, muffled sound But I can Hear it just the same Look at the misty for calling in

Look at the misty fog rolling in And Feel its damp chillness I'm shivering again.

That little barnacled boat It seems so drab and lonely Makes me feel a little sad.

But after all lt's Just a painting . . .

ME, MYSELF, OR I? Sometimes I wonder exactly what am I? I ponder the question who is the real me? With awed amazement I try and see inside myself maybe to discover what wants to be hidden?! Is there some tangible creature that tells a tale if only to spur my anger at my łack of knowledge? Is a sort of parachute there beside me to soften the blow of when I discover the real me?

loan Baez passed up the podium and mike to sit with us on the floor

I'd never even seen loan Baez betore. She's so cool I can't believe it Here she is, someone who played at Woodstock with Jimi Hendrix, The Who, Bob Dylan, and knew the Beatles, yet she talked to us like a real person. She didn't want anyone to know she was on our campus, but when someone found out, she agreed to talk to whoever wanted to go up and rap. She played a few songs off her new album (unreleased as yet), "Children of the '80s", but most of the time was spent talking about war, like politics, and comparisons of the Zus and the '80s, I'd like to thank loan Baez for bringing her love to Newman/Ursuline."

CANS, CANS, CANS!

Did anyone bring a can-opener?

Those are pretty funny-looking cans!

Each year our schools get together and bring in canned toods for the needy people in Santa Rosa and vicinity. We all work really hard in getting hundreds of cans. The Sisters and anyone who will, help distribute them to the hungry families in our towns. Keep up the good work!

A Day For Missions

This year we brought back a tradition that we hadn't fufilled in the last couple years. Our school set aside one day to raise money for the missions. We had a carnival with games and food everywhere. All this money went to the missions. We even elected Mission Day Queens. These girls were chosen because of the way they help out the community; Senior Jenny Shea, Junior Amy Lowe, Sophomore Tina Indinoli and Freshman Anita Moyle
